

KANCIL THE CLEVER MOUSE DEER

Retold By Irene Ritchie and Eddy Pursubaryanto

Illustrated by Margono Pokoh

KANCIL TRICKS THE OGRE

One morning an Ogre awakes from a dream where he was told to eat a Kancil if he desires power. He goes in search of the Kancil but the problem is, he has never met this animal. Every animal he meets he thinks is the Kancil. He meets many Indonesian animals. In the end, the Kancil's trickery ensures that he is not eaten by the Ogre.

KANCIL HELPS THE BIRDS

In a village, a group of farmers have begun a meeting to prepare for the harvest season, which has arrived early. This has confused the birds whose babies cannot yet fly. They find Kancil and ask for his help. One morning the farmers begin to harvest their wet rice field. Suddenly the farmers are surprised by the appearance of the Kancil who screams very loudly to distract them. They chase him forgetting their harvest. This event is repeated every day until finally the baby birds can fly away by themselves.

KANCIL GOES FISHING

Kancil is walking along the river searching for a suitable place to fish. The Wild Boar, Tiger and Elephant want to join him so agree to carry out the tasks ordered by Kancil. A fierce ogre finds the animal guarding the fish and gobbles up all the fish. Kancil puts a different animal in charge but each time the ogre shows up and eats the fish. Kancil realises he will have to do something. He finds a fallen bamboo tree which looks like the fish basket and traps the ogre when he comes looking for the fish.

THE CROCODILE AND THE BULL

One day in the forest a great wind strikes down a tree hitting a crocodile sunning himself on the riverbank. A wild bull comes along and helps the crocodile back to the river on his back. The crocodile becomes hungry and wants to eat some meat from the bull's's back. The crocodile and bull meet the Kancil and ask him to solve their problem. The Kancil wants to see the places where the events occurred. They replay all the events including putting the fallen tree on the crocodile's back. They decide to leave him there but he begs for their mercy and promises not to ever behave badly again. He is then freed from the tree.

KANCIL AND THE GREEDY SNAKE

A rooster is looking after two baby crows while their parents are out gathering food. A hungry snake eats the babies. The rooster and parents find Kancil and ask his advice. The King had been hunting in the forest and is resting near a lake close by and had taken off his necklace. Kancil suggests the male crow get the necklace and place it near the snake's rock. The King's soldiers come to look for the necklace and capture the snakes for the King's Zoo.

KANCIL AND THE TIGERS

In the village of the tigers, an election is to take place for the King of the Forest. Each tiger promotes himself and as no one can agree on the King, a great fight takes place. Kancil tries to stop the fighting and makes himself the King. Once the fighting ceases the Kancil goes away and all the animals realise that living in conflict is a miserable state to be in.